For example, you may investigate types of tents before choosing the best one for your upcoming Outdoor Adventure, learn more about Shakespeare's life before a drama project, or research a disease related to your project animal. You can also attach additional print-outs, photos, or other information related to your learning or that you create as a result of your research.

Topic: _____

What are your learning goals/is there a question you're looking to answer:

Why are you choosing to research more about this topic:

Where will you look for information?

Results:
What are the most important things that you learned? What was the most useful source of information? Did you learn something you weren't expecting to? How will you use this information? If you made a decision after your research, what did you decide and what were the factors that helped you make the decision?

For some projects (like genealogy) that you will spend a lot of time working on one research area, you may also want to keep a Time Log record sheet to track the time.
